Robert is a nearly thirty-year veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department, retired from his final assigned to Central Area as a Police Sergeant. He has trained Recruit Peace Officers, Probationary Peace Officers and Field Peace Officers for more than twenty-seven years in Basic Patrol Tasks, Operation Techniques, and Advanced Investigative Techniques. Robert has completed the Los Angeles Police Department's Instructor Development Course and was assigned to the Los Angeles Police Academy as a core instructor in the areas of Criminal Law and Law Enforcement Academics. In 2004, Robert received his Juris Doctorate in Law. He has completed the California Commission on Peace Officers Standards and Training (POST) Academy Instructor Certificate Course and is certificate to teach in POST certified Police Academy in the State of California. Robert is the owner of the Law Office of Robert Grant, III, APC, a Pasadena law practice that focuses on First Responders and those legal issues that impact their lives and careers.

Robert's primary career goal to render expert witness service in the areas of Bio-Forensic Investigations, Advanced Criminal Procedures, Police Science, and Law Enforcement Leadership and Management Techniques.

Integrated Operational Policing

The art of law enforcement has evolved tremendously since the post-Civil War, Reconstructive era of the United States. As the Millennial Generation of peace officers enter public service, Police Science is also evolving to embody the best practices of historical policing while developing the intellectual and scientific methodologies for future generations. Though several methodologies are utilized in a law enforcement management setting, the Police Administration and Operations in America have been debated and theorized for over a half century without plotting comprehensive plans to implement best practices. Robert continues to develop methodologies in policing that incorporates the traditional best police practices and the concurrent innovations into the theoretical management model of Integrated Operational Policing. Robert now applies his training, experience, and expertise to defining operational best practices, management and leadership expectations in policing, and delivering expert opinions to the several areas of Operational Policing. With 34 years of policing experience, Robert now focuses on the development of instructional courses and expert testimony and problem solving.
